1800s etched ostrich egg gets 'nest' at NWC Museum

By RYAN GALLUCCI
NWC Public Affairs Staff

A 19th century Sailor's unique scrimshaw ostrich egg, carefully handed down from generation to generation, has found its final nesting place at the Naval War College Museum.

Daniel Cushing Raiche donated his grandfather's engraved egg during ceremonies at the museum on July 24. The shell is decorated with scrimshaw pictures made by Andrew Raiche while he served on the original USS Enterprise in the late 1800s.

"My grandfather traveled the world on the Enterprise," said Raiche, as he presented the egg to the museum's curator, Robert Cembrola.

"The etchings he created were his way of telling the story. He was at Mt. Vesuvius when it erupted and you can see it on the egg."

Andrew Raiche passed the egg on to his grandson, Daniel, in the 1940s. It has remained in his close care ever since. Andrew and his adventures with the Navy have often been the subjects of the Raiche family's legends.

Daniel had tried to have the egg placed in a Rhode Island-area museum for the last 10 years. He was overjoyed that the Naval War College expressed an interest in his family heirloom.

"I wanted it to be in a place where the family could enjoy it," he said. "Now that it's in Newport I know my grandfather's smiling."

When the museum accepted the donation, Daniel Raiche felt it just made sense. His grandson, Musician 1st Class Nathan Bissel, is currently stationed here with Navy Band Northeast. Bissel is a native of Glocester, R.I., and the first member of his family since his great, great grandfather Andrew to serve in the Navy.

"I grew up listening to the stories," said Bissel. "Once I joined the Navy it really hit home. It's great that it worked out that I'm here (in Newport) at the same time."

Daniel's close relatives are all familiar with the stories of the egg but it is still unclear how Andrew honed his craft.

"When he first came home his mother didn't believe that he made the etchings," said Daniel. "So he took the egg and carved a dedication to his mother in the bottom."

Andrew made a number of other etchings during his time on the Enterprise. However, the egg is the only one remaining in the family. Most of his work he sold to his officers at sea.

According to Daniel, he made more than $2,000 for his work; all of which he gave to his family when he returned from his tour.

Carl Brashear, master diver featured in movie, dies at 75

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (NNS) — Nearly 800 family, friends, active duty and retired service members gathered at the Naval Amphibious Base (NAB) Little Creek Chapel July 29, to pay their final respects to retired Master Chief Carl Brashear, the Navy's first black Master Diver and a man whose boundless determination inspired every walk of life.

Brashear died July 25 at Naval Medical Center Portsmouth of respiratory and heart failure. He was 75.

Brashear, 75, became known throughout the world after actor Cuba Gooding Jr. portrayed Brashear in the movie, Men of Honor.

Brashear's son Phillip, a Chief Warrant Officer 4 in the U.S. Army, who returned from service in Iraq on emergency leave to be at his father's bedside when he passed away, spoke candidly about his father's courage and character.

"He taught people world-wide that your race, your gender, your religion, none of that makes any difference," said Phillip. "You can achieve your goals, you can be held accountable to your characteristics as a person not by the color of your skin."

Brashear joined the Navy in 1948 at age 17, shortly after the Navy had desegregated. In 1954 he was accepted and graduated from the diving program.

In 1967, a year after an injury onboard the salvage ship Hoist cost him his left leg, Brashear became the first Navy diver to be restored to full active duty as an amputee.

Brashear retired from the Navy in 1979.

Law scholars discuss global challenges

By RYAN GALLUCCI
NWC Public Affairs Staff

The Naval War College hosted its annual International Law Conference from June 28-30.

"This (conference) is an opportunity to bring together legal scholars and practitioners from around the world and see how they address their issues," said Professor Jane Dalton, who holds the college's Stockton Chair of International Law, and who helped orchestrate the conference.

"The attendees and the panelists engage in a dialogue that will hopefully have a global impact."

This year's conference addressed three major issues: threats from the global commons, strategic communication and natural disaster response. Also, the conference addressed "Posse Comitatus," the law that prohibits American active duty military from conducting law enforcement operations within the United States.

Paul McHale, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Homeland Security, delivered the keynote address and posed several serious questions regarding Posse Comitatus.

"There has been an extraordinary change with the role of the military in society since 2001," said McHale. "Today, if we have military missions on our soil, how do we bring clarity and detail that enables support of missions while avoiding unlawful intelligence-gathering activities?"

McHale was clear to note

Coyote pups don't need a handout

In light of the recent encounters with coyote adults and pups at Naval Station (NAVSTA) Newport, the Environmental Department has submitted an advisory to all hands, endorsed by Capt. Todd Malloy, Commanding Officer.

Shannon Kam, NAVSTA natural resources manager, said there have been several reported sightings of coyotes on NAVSTA property, particularly near the Public Works Building 1. Additionally, coyotes have been sighted around the Naval Undersea Warfare Center's leased facilities at NAVSTA near Gate 11.

These animals appear extremely tame and unafraid of human contacts. Coyote pups have not yet learned to be wary.

"It is important to remember that coyotes are part of this ecosystem and they are here to stay," Kam said. "Humans and coyotes need to learn to live together."

The following precautions are encouraged both in and around your office building, and at home:

Avoid open backyard compost piles, do not feed pets outside or leave food for coyotes. Don't feed feral cats, as they are a food source for coyotes.

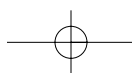

Finally, report wounded deer to the R.I. Department of Environmental Management.

If you have additional questions, concerns, or would like to report a sighting, please call Kam at 841-6377.

NAPS seeks sponsor families as homes away from home

The Naval Academy Preparatory School (NAPS) at Naval Station Newport is seeking volunteers to sponsor midshipman and cadet candidates for the 2006-2007 academic year.

The NAPS Midshipman and Cadet Candidate Sponsor Program provides students with the opportunity to formulate relationships with the civilian and military members of the surrounding community and for the sponsors to provide a home away from home, while acting as a mentor and role model for future midshipmen.

Host families offer students respite from the rigors of their military and academic responsibilities and an opportunity to relax in an informal, hospitable environment.

Sponsors provide transportation, extend invitations to community and/or family activities or functions, or open their homes to students for a home-cooked meal, a place to study, or just watch television.

Additionally, there are holiday periods such as Thanksgiving, Christmas and spring break when some students will be unable to make it home. For some of the students arriving this month, it will be their first experience being away from home.

Typical liberty periods are Fridays, 4 p.m. to midnight; Saturdays, 9 a.m. to midnight; and Sundays, 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Sponsors should live within 25 miles of NAPS and have a positive outlook on the military. Military sponsors should hold the rank of E-7 and above.

To become a sponsor, or for additional information, please contact Lt. Thomas Sheldon by e-mail at sponsor@naps.edu, or by phone at (401) 619-1587. Potential sponsors may visit the NAPS website at www.naps.edu, and click on the "sponsor info" icon.

knew how to do it," said Daniel.

Retired Rear Adm. Joseph Strasser, executive director of the Naval War College Foundation, accepted the egg on behalf of the college and Naval Station Newport.

Strasser thought that the egg had finally come "full circle."

Strasser's final sea command was the USS Enterprise in 1989—exactly one century after Andrew Raiche made his voyage.

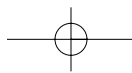

"My grandfather had a flair for adventure," said Daniel. "Even once he was out of the Navy he had to pursue something else."

The egg will be displayed periodically at the museum on Luce Avenue. For hours and information on the museum contact the director's office at (401) 841-4052.
